A FEMALE PLUNGER AT MONTE CARLO.

Mrs. McAdams, an American, has just finished the most successful season of any woman attending the Casino at Monte Carlo.

At first she refused to speak for publication, but when asked, "Is it true you are the biggest winner at Monte Carlo this season?" she replied: "I have no means of knowing, but I have done very well, indeed. There were some men punters who must have done far better."

"It is stated that you won $50,000 in the course of yesterday afternoon.
"That is true, but—and she smiled regretfully, "I lost most of it the same evening. But I've won that amount several times, and have lost a good part of it, too, at later sittings. Still, I have nothing to complain of, although I have had heaps of bad times, and am getting back some of the money I gave the bank in former seasons.

"Have you a system?" "I used to have, but it is no use. You can't circumvent a game of pure chance like this with any system. I tried them all, and found them worth less. I rely entirely upon chance. I have no superstitions about where I sit or who is next me, or anything of that sort. They are more fatal even than

"Might I ask approximately how much you have won and kept up to

"You might put it down at $130,000 or thereabouts, but I've been having bad luck the last two sittings, and fear I shall lose it all if I don't leave soon My husband is coming from England for me in a few days, and then we re-turn immediately to the United States. VERDI'S SWAN SONG.—The veteran maestro, Verdi, is busy with his new opera, "King Lear," in the seclusion of his residence at Genoa, where Boito, who has put together a splendid libretto, has been his constant companion for the last three months. The bracing sea air appears to have a wonderful effect on Verdi, who is remarkably well and strong, and will sit for four or five hours at the piano, composing the new work, which he calls, half seriously and half jokingly, the song of the dying swan. Although little is known as yet of this new chef d'œuvre, it is certain that in it Verdi intends to greatly modify his later style, that of the "Falstaff," plunging resolutely back into his former manner, which produced such gems of melody and sentiment as are to be found in the "Traviata,"

MEDICINAL.

Many persons have their good day and their bad day. Others are about half sick all the time. They have headache, backache, and are restless and nervous. Food does not taste good, and the digestion is poor; the skin is dry and sallow and disfigured with pimples or eruptions; sleep brings no rest and work is a burden.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

It clears out the channels through which poisons are carried from the body. When all impurities are removed from the blood nature takes right hold and completes the cure.

If there is constipation, take Ayer's Pills. They awaken the drowsy action of the liver; they cure biliousness.
